Bright blooms in containers of various shapes, colors, and sizes made for modern, whimsical centerpieces. • A hand-tied bouquet full of ruffled white flowers echoed the texture of the lace bodice on Susi's gown. • Ceremony program using a mix of colors and fonts lightened the mood.
• Wood boxes of wheatgrass were a perfect organic addition to the tablescape.

Susi and Brian did something unexpected for their Lake Tahoe, California, wedding. Instead of defaulting to an earthy color palette, they went in the opposite direction with bright orange, raspberry, and turquoise for an effect that felt special, but not too fancy. Subtle rustic accents, such as their mason jar motif, were right at home in the woody setting.

Colorful flower bouquets brought a pop of color to the ceremony. A hand tied bouquet of all white flowers echoed the texture of the lace bodice on the bride's gown. Ceremony programs using a mix of colors and fonts lightened the mood. Wood boxes of wheatgrass were a perfect organic addition to the tablescapes.

Sue and Brian did something unexpected for their Lake Tahoe, California, wedding: instead of selecting to sit with family and friends, they chose to sit separately. Brian, with bright orange hair, and Sue, with blonde hair, sat at the head of the table. The bride and groom sat at the end of the table. The bride and groom sat at the end of the table.

Colorful paper lanterns and an olive tree livened up the reception tent.

TIP

Paper lanterns lend an air of celebration and style to any space; not to mention, they're also an affordable décor option.

clockwise from above left: Overlooking the lake, a rustic bench made with tree stumps was softened with a few color-coordinated pillows. Flower-filled lanterns were accented with ribbons. ■ Even the escort cards reinforced the theme. Guests' names and seating assignments were handwritten in white ink on leaf-shaped tags. ■ A mason jar and firefly illustration added some outdoorsy flavor to the menu cards.

KATIE & CHRIS • SEPTEMBER 2

The wedding theme was inspired by the natural beauty of the Lake Tahoe forest. The color palette was organic browns, greens, and shades of white. The decor was simple and elegant, with a focus on natural materials. The wedding was held in a tented wedding in the thick of the Lake Tahoe forest in California. Quirky and homespun signs spoke to the unfussy locale, while a color palette of organic browns, greens, and shades of white provided a decidedly sophisticated air to the day.

clockwise from top left: Chalkboard signs with handwritten messages were scattered across the grounds for a folksy feel. • A sailcloth tent with stark wood poles resembled Tahoe's tall trees. • Katie and Chris explored the grounds of the Ritz-Carlton, Lake Tahoe for some wedding postceremony pics. • Among a sea of pine trees, a grassy patch was perfect for the couple's open-air ceremony.
